THE ADVENTURES OF MYTHIC THE SNAKE

Daughter and Granddaughter with no intention to purchase
Went to a Reptilian Convention.

They returned with a cage, an orange snake, and some mice
(in a bag, which they fridged, wrapped with plastic, in ice).

They named the snake Mythic and he was quite small
There was fresh water, sand, and one defrosted mouse
His glass house, secured by big clips, was quite tall
Still my eyes wandered round to the cats in the house.

And then came the news that there was a Pandemic
Which President Trump said was 'only the flu'
So just as I pondered the weirdness of that
My granddaughter came to me holding a cat,
Saying "Mythic is now eating two."

Oh, how the anxiety grew with the news
The six feet apart thing, Trump's "all about me"
It seemed that this country was split between views
The masked and the unmasked, the meaning of "free"
Therefore lost in the politics, protests, and shit
I missed the announcement when Mythic ate three.

The day came when family said Mythic ate four
I'd been online Trumping about broken laws
I was dragged away mourning my words to the cause
To the Mythic I'd known as a bit of a twig
But I stood there astonished
For Mythic was big.

And the horrors went on in the news day by day
Till it seemed like our country'd been hit with a curse
Next my family came in and made everything worse
They tensely informed me that something was wrong
That Mythic was not in his cage — he was gone!

For many days following I was uneasy
I'd check out the tub and the sheets on the bed
The bookshelves, the cupboards, the closets, the plants,
The shoes in the hall and behind the TV
The thought of a cat getting him made me queasy
Then after three weeks I assumed he was dead.

I'd just about finished some work in the house
When I saw our cat Mithoo bent down to the floor
He was rigid, eyes large, reaching under the fridge
Quickly, all of our cats were behind a closed door
While my daughter worked swiftly defrosting a mouse.

Well Mythic was hungry and came toward that mouse,
And he took a large bite of the head
Then my daughter with tongs clamped the bait's other end
And she picked him up while he was fed

So Mythic's adventure is over at last
We're all happy he will survive
There are weights on the top of his habitat now but he's outgrown this space pretty fast
In three days his new cage will arrive
